Washing your hands is important. Anything you touch could have germs on it; your toys, the playground slide or the toilet. If you accidentally swallow germs, they can make you very sick. That's why it's important to regularly wash your hands, especially after using the toilet or before picking up food.

When in Cambodia, I met kids that used to get sick because of germs. They didn't know to wash their hands before eating, cover up their leftover food or boil the well water before drinking it. But ADRA taught them many things about keeping clean, and now they don't get as sick! Germs can be found in all sorts of ordinary places. Can you help me find out where?
